This exhibition brings together eighteen built and speculative projects by LTL Architects, an award-winning New York-based firm, founded in 1997 by principals Paul Lewis, Marc Tsurumaki, and David J. Lewis. In their architectural practice, LTL's research and tactics mine program, site, and constraints to surface possibility and fulfill function through highly layered and interactive interventions. According to the architects, the goal of their work, "... is to intensify and expand the impact of a reduced set of operations, asking less to be more, through the interweaving of functional engagement and material conditions."
